Catherine of Aragon was the daughter of Spanish monarchs King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella. She married Henry VIII, the first of his six wives, in 1509. Catherine was Queen of England for 14 years before the marriage ended in divorce in 1533.

Catherine of Aragon: The Spanish Queen of Henry VIII

Born to Spain's powerful King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, Catherine of Aragon was one of the most influential figures of her time. She married Henry VIII when he was still a child and was his queen for over 14 years before they divorced. Catherine was known for her beauty, intelligence, and devotion to the Catholic faith. She was also a strong and independent woman who worked tirelessly to support her husband and their children.

The Spanish Princess

The story of Catherine of Aragon is one of the most well-known in English history. Her marriage to Henry VIII was a key event in the English Reformation, and her eventual divorce paved the way for Henry's own marriage to Anne Boleyn. Despite the challenges she faced, Catherine remained a devoted wife and mother until her death in 1536.
